A Message from
Mr S. B. JACOBS
President of the Junior
Chamber of Commerce

The Canterbury Junior Chamber of Commerce has for the last year, been sending Food Parcels to Britain from donations which it has received from its own members, and from donations generously given by some few friends of the Junior Chamber.

We have several lists of names, which have been obtained through the co-operation of the London Chamber of Commerce and the Union of British Junior Chambers of Commerce. The last list we have received includes the names of several men who were Prisoners of War.

The need of the English people cannot be too strongly stressed. No one suggests that they are starving, but the monotony of their everyday food and the difficulty of obtaining fats makes some effort on their behalf essential.

It is therefore with the greatest sincerity that I commend this appeal to the people of Christchurch.

The thanks of the Junior Chamber are due to the producer, Mrs Ina M. Allen, and all her players, for the time so generously given in the production.

REPERTORY SOCIETY TO PRODUCE "THE ANATOMIST"

By James Bridie

This was the play that brought Bridie, and with him, Flora Robson, into the West End. It scored a triumph and was followed by a succession of his plays at the Westminster Theatre. It has been said that drawing-room comedies, costume dramas and thrillers are the most popular type of plays; if this is so it is not hard to discover reasons for "The Anatomist's" success for it encompasses all of these elements.

"The Anatomist" will be produced at the Radiant Theatre for a season of 7 nights, commencing September 27th.

"MARIONETTE THEATRE COMES TO CHRISTCHURCH"

The Goodwin Marionette Theatre commences a season of six nights at the Radiant Theatre, early in November.

To the best of our knowledge the Goodwin Marionette Theatre is the first permanent company in New Zealand to devote itself entirely to the perfection of the Puppet Stage.

Started some eight years ago, at the beginning of the war, the theatre has already achieved considerable success and received favourable criticism. Travelling throughout the country during the war years, the company has played to Army, Navy and Air Force stations—to schools and wherever an interest in living theatre has been expressed.

When speaking on the Puppet, George Bernard Shaw said: "I always hold up the wooden actors as instructive object lessons to our flesh-and-blood players. The wooden ones though stiff, and continually glaring at you with the same overcharged expression, yet move you as only the experienced living actors can."

THE STORY BEHIND THE JUNIOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Junior Chamber of Commerce consists of young men the world over who are conscious of the tremendous need for young men to accept Civic responsibility and serve the communities from which they derive their livelihood. Young men desirous of training themselves to be the better equipped to accept added responsibilities to take the benefit of that training to all peoples.

There exists in the movement a spirit of genuine friendship and a true fellowship amongst young men from all walks of life and of differing views on matters political, social, economic and cultural. There is an acceptance of Civic responsibility and a desire to benefit from the training which comes with an active participation in the solution of community problems. Above all, there are young men who aspire to be leaders, and by virtue of the wonderful opportunities offered for self-development, will become leaders in fields of commercial, civic and national endeavour in later life.

All activities the world over are conducted with an absolute exclusion of partisan tendencies, racial, religious or political.

In New Zealand there are 24 Junior Chambers, with a membership of some 3000, and extending from Whangarei to Invercargill. These Chambers together form the National body, which, in its turn, forms part of a Junior Chamber International. The Movement has not only stood the test of time, but has grown tremendously in U.S.A. over the last 32 years. It flourishes in Canada, Great Britain, Belgium, France, Spain, Burma, South America, South Africa, Australia—altogether some 40 countries, embracing many races and languages. The spirit of fellowship and selflessness in the hearts of young men the world over is surely a priceless asset in the struggle for International goodwill.

The movement is open to all young men of good character between the ages of 18 and 40, and already forms a good cross-section of the community. Already there have been scores of examples of young men lacking confidence and ill-equipped to express their views who have, by virtue of a training amidst young men of their own age, blossomed out as active and progressive members of their communities.

In a hundred ways in their own cities and towns, Jaycees, as members are familiarly known, are extending their boundless energy and enthusiasm to the improvement of their towns by planning and implementing progressive civic projects, by stimulating civic pride and by exemplifying that individual obligation to serve is the very principle and price of our democratic way of life.

During the first three years of the Canterbury Junior Chamber's activities a good deal has been accomplished and a great deal more will be attempted in the future. The success of these efforts will depend very largely on the support given by the public generally and the business community in particular. This has been readily forthcoming in the past and will undoubtedly continue in the future. Such young men can be a definite power for good in their communities when banded together to promote efficiency and advance their characters—and those in charge of commercial and civic life can place implicit faith in their adherence to beauty. It should be readily agreed that the energy and enthusiasm of youth, when blended with the mature wisdom of older men, can achieve much.

There is an obligation upon all "to transmit this country and this city not less, but greater, better and more beautiful than it was transmitted to
